The behavior you promote is exclusive breastfeeding until 6 months of age. You meet a woman who gives her 3-month-old child water during hot days because she thinks that otherwise the baby would be thirsty.

The behavior you promote is using organic fertilizers instead of chemical ones. You meet a farmer who says that if he uses organic fertilizers, he will have a lower harvest and gain less food and money.

The behavior you promote is having and using a handwashing station. You meet a woman whose husband says that it is a waste of money and effort, as the family can wash hands even without such a station.

The behavior you promote is young children (1-3 years) eating a diverse, nutrient-rich diet (at least 4 out of 7 food groups). You meet a mother who says that her family cannot afford to give their children such a diet.

The behavior you promote is husbands helping their wives with domestic tasks (so that they have more time for childcare and for rest). You meet a man who says that his friends and neighbours will laugh at him if they see him doing “women’s tasks”.

The behavior you promote is joining a savings group. You meet a woman who says that she does not have the money to join.
